REPORT
OF
THE SCHOOL BOARD
OF THE
TOWN OF PELHAM,
For the Year Ending March 1, 1891.

SCHOOL BOARD.

AUGUSTUS BERRY,	.	Term Expires March, 1891.
HENRY S. RUSS,	.	Term Expires March, 1892.
FREDERIC A. CUTTER,		Term Expires March, 1891.

REPORT.

The Board of Education are happy in reporting a year of successful schools. They have been in charge of the same teachers for the year,—an important condition of their success. The artist must execute his own conception; no one can take his unfinished work and successfully complete it; nor can another take the incomplete work of the teacher and so conduct it that there shall be no fault or break.

PROGRESS.

This is a significant term. It is inseparable from all real life. Where there is no progress, there is no true life. Schools run year after year in the same ruts, if not dead, are in a process of death. The matter of starting right is a feature of progress apparent in the past year. It has come to be understood in some instances at least, that unless the child starts right, subsequent work will be very faulty. There has been progress in method. In nothing is there more importance of method than in the work of the school, and nowhere else has there been so little method. There has been progress in the idea that the pupil must do his own work, and not the teacher or some other pupil do it for him. The idea has made some progress that the school is not so much for memorizing books as to learn to think, reason and use one's own powers. There has been progress in understanding that it is not the easiest of all things to teach ; that it is a responsible work demanding culture, skill and large preparation. There has been progress in the idea that the advance of the pupil does not consist in what he has been over, but in the how he has been over it. The idea seems to be dawning in some directions that a child's training is of more importance than the training of a colt, and that the conditions of it should be, at least, as carefully guarded ; that mind has such value that there should be great caution in regard to the one who is allowed to work upon it. There has been an actual advance in the work of the schools ; and it is cheering to be assured that the cause of education moves in spite of all that tends to keep it in the ruts of the past.

JUDGMENTS UPON THE CHARACTER OF THE SCHOOLS.

It is not just to form these from rumor, the tales of children, nor in any other way than by repeated visits to the schools ; nor should one pass judgment upon school work until he fully understands the work and knows something about the opinions of experienced educators. It does not follow that a school is a failure because children have their grievances, the excellence of the school may be the occasion of these grievances ; nor that the school is all right because the children are pleased ; the reason of their satisfaction may be that they are not required to do what they ought to do. Mutual forbearance is needful in all the parties to the school. Teachers must exercise it ; children must be taught it ; parents must have this spirit. It is a condition where a hasty judgment by either of the parties is perilous.

(19)

EDUCATION AN EARNEST MATTER.

The school should be pervaded by an earnest spirit. Earnestness characterizes the true teacher; it is something that such a teacher imparts to the pupils. The test of what is permissible in teacher and pupils is the effect upon the ardor with which school work is performed. Ought that dampens ardor must be disallowed.

SYSTEM.

Success, in any kind of effort, is conditioned upon some well-ordered system. This is greatly needed in our schools. In both civil and social life, the individual is made subject to the civil and social systems. In a certain sense the individual is merged in the system. Something of this is especially necessary in the schools. And by this it is not meant that the individual pupil shall be completely at the mercy of the system established in the school, but that while the system may bend to the accommodation of the individual scholar, he must also accommodate himself to the system. And with this spirit pervading the schools, it would not be difficult to have a system of classification, that while it is allowed to accommodate individual cases, would not essentially discommode any, and would largely increase the efficiency of the schools and correct a great evil in them.

UP WITH THE TIMES.

The expression abreast of the times is significant. To be behind the times is not merely a fault, but a reproach. The advance in the last twenty-five years in educational ideas, principles, methods and implements, has been parallel with the improvement in other things, and it is of the first importance that, not only teachers, the school year, all are in a neat condition, a great contrast with the condition of the school-houses a few years since. With the exception of No. 4, each is well arranged and furnished for school work, and it is a pity that this house, with its pleasant location, its beautiful yard, should be so deficient in facilities for school work. The seats and desks need to be rearranged and space obtained for more black-board. In these particulars the house is forty years behind the times and the work of an efficient teacher is thus impaired a large per cent. The school-room with its furnishing has the same relation to productive labor that improved tools and barns have to the income of the farm; the arrangements of the shop with its machinery to the work and profits of the mechanic; the construction of the store to the business of the merchant; and it is hoped that the house in No. 4 will soon be unsurpassed by any in town in facilities for the best school work.

KEEPING SCHOOL BUILDINGS IN REPAIR.

This is economy in many senses. It makes the scholars careful; it is a lesson in neatness, taste, frugality and true thrift. This is a wise expenditure of money. It is for education in a real sense. Repairs should be frequent. Another old adage, "the stitch in time saves nine," is true. Every few years the house should be painted, the desks varnished, and the walls tinted.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Three of the school-rooms have such instruments. It is hoped that an effort will be made to put such an instrument in each of the others. Apart from the value of musical culture, it is an efficient aid in securing good order and in imparting refinement to school-life.

INTEREST OF THE CITIZEN IN THE SCHOOLS.

A thoughtful citizen remarked, respecting the annual school-meeting, "This is the most important meeting of the town." The substantial citizen should express an interest in the schools and recognize his duty to them, whether he have children in them or not. Children's lives and children's destiny should call forth his interest. The welfare of the town, the value of real estate, will be largely conditioned on the character of the schools, and he cannot afford to neglect them. He should make himself acquainted with their standing by personal visitation; and by his active interest and co-operation, correct their faults, and aid in their improvement.

FLAGS.

In the past year the star-spangled banner has been raised over three of the school-houses. These flags were procured largely by the personal effort of the scholars. Their raising was celebrated by commendable literary exercises on the part of the scholars, and social festivities that were participated in by parents, children, citizens, and friends, constituting an occasion of interest, pleasure and profit that will be historic.

TEACHERS.

The Board of Education feel that they were fortunate in securing the teachers of the past year. It is difficult to find teachers of character and experience for our schools. The country school is sort of a training school for larger places. The standard of qualification has been raised much, but it is not as high as it should be. The ideal teacher cannot be found, and Boards of Education and patrons of school must be content with what may be termed 'measurably good work. The Board of Education, in selecting teachers, have sought an adaptation to particular schools, and have tried to have the schools acceptable to every patron, correcting and changing everything in the schools that was objectionable to any patron, when it could be done without interfering with good school work. It is impossible to procure teachers of every qualification, but there are qualifications they must have, such as character, intellectual attainments, literary furnishing and some skill in teaching. There are other qualities, such as personal attractions, winning traits, pleasing address and presence, that are very desirable, but cannot be expected in a full measure in every one; and it is often better to retain a reasonably good teacher than to incur the risk of a change. Those schools yield the best results, that have the same teachers a succession of terms.

FREE TEXT-BOOKS.

The efficiency of the schools has been largely increased by free text-books and school supplies. They deepen interest and help the order of the school-room. We may, with no exaggeration, say that the system has worked like a charm in the schools. The books have generally been used with care. Teachers have, in some instances, covered the books in general use in the school-room, such as the dictionaries, and parents often cover the books their children are using. It is gratifying that there has been such harmony in the introduction of the system. To drop it now would, in a certain sense, be like dropping the schools. The Board of Education have studied economy and efficiency. The expense of the supplies will vary from year to year, but in no year has it been as large as was anticipated.

TIME-PIECES.

Two of the school-rooms are furnished with clocks. It is very important that the others should be.

ROLL OF HONOR.

This is not to be lightly considered. It inspires the the children and is a power in securing regularity and punctuality in attendance. Many fail, from no fault of their own, to secure a place in this roll, and they call forth sympathy and admiration. There are a number who have a perfect record for a single term, and others who were trying for it and failed from causes beyond their control.
