TRUSTEES' REPORT

The condition of the library remains practically the same as last year and there seems to be nothing of consequence that need be said concerning it by the trustees to the people of the town.

Only one purchase of new books has been made in the past year but another lot will be added very soon; probably before this report is printed.

A nice, old fashioned, black walnut book case, formerly the property of Mr. Wm. Sherburne, was presented to the library by J. W. Clark last summer, also a large picture of Dr. Amos Batchelder, who was for many years a prominent physician and highly esteemed citizen of the town. The picture was given by members of the family.

The book case was put in the Town Officers' room and the picture was hung in the Memorial and Reading room.

The Treasurer's report shows a larger balance than it really should, for the present purchase of books should have been made sooner and the amount, probably around $100, come out of the current year appropriation.

We think that an appropriation of the same amount as last year will be sufficient and recommend it.

We again thank those who have made gifts to the library for their interest and assistance and assure them that their help is appreciated by the people and the trustees.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT

To the School Board of Pelham.

Greeting:

It is my honor to submit herewith my fourth annual report as superintendent of your schools, and to this I have attached the report of the principal of your high school.

The teacher is the one predominating factor in determining the excellence of a school. Although it is true that a poorly lighted or heated room may be a menace to the health of the pupils, and the lack of equipment may be a handicap to the work of any teacher, it is equally true that a properly planned, heated, and equipped room, as important as all these matters are, is of no avail in securing results when presided over by an incompetent teacher. The excellent teacher never has been and never will be paid what her services are worth to the community. No community is rich enough to pay her in full. The poor teacher is always over paid whatever her salary may be.

It should be the policy of any school district to retain its best teachers by encouragement in every way, whether it be by criticism, pleasant living conditions, or social recognition. It is very discouraging to any school official to be obliged to beg for a proper home for a teacher, and good schools cannot be long maintained under such conditions.

Four of the seven teachers in your employ hold their positions over from last year and four live permanently or temporarily within the district. This is a better showing than in the immediate past and your schools reflect the advantage of having a permanent, resident teaching force. I believe that all your schools at the present time are doing creditable work.

The installation of the heating plants in the new school building renders the rooms much more comfortable and attractive. The share in the expense sustained by the school can but foster in the pupils an interest and a pride in caring for public property, a valuable lesson in civics. However, the improvements in this school serve to make the contrast with the other school buildings in the district the more marked. There can be but little doubt that four of the other five school buildings in the district will be used for an indefinite period. I believe that funds expended in rendering these houses more comfortable and convenient would prove an excellent investment for the town, in appreciating property values and in attracting to move into the community a desirable population, a population which will not wait for a visit from the truant officer before sending their children to school.

You have in attendance at the present time at your high school sixteen pupils in the first year of a secondary course, a larger number than you have attending in all the other three years of a similar course in high schools or academies outside of the town. This seems to indicate that a much larger number of parents will send their children to a local high school, if there be one, than will patronize such schools situated farther distant from their homes. Whatever the motives may be which influence parents to send their children to a local school when they would not send them out of the town, need not enter into the discussion, but it is probable that the inaccessibility of such schools is a large factor in determining the decision. The immediate prospect of better transportation facilities is negative.

These facts raise the question as to whether it would not be profitable to add another year to your course and make it a two year high school. Would not similar benefits be derived from an extended course as are now enjoyed from the one year course? This year is the proper time for the district to adopt some policy in this matter. The cost of maintaining such a school might not differ greatly from the expense of paying for a like number of tuitions elsewhere, and it would mean that a larger number of your pupils would probably get another year of education at least. Such a move would call for another teacher capable of teaching commercial subjects and for the equipping of a room for it. Are you ready to make the sacrifice at this time for the children of the district which such a plan necessitates?

I am including in this report an extract from the General Statistics Report for the school year of 1921-22. I wish to call your attention to the increase in membership of your schools over that of the previous year, and also to the decrease in per cent of attendance. This has fallen to 85.7 per cent, or nearly  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent below the average of the state, which is 93.11 per cent. It places us in the unenviable position of being the tenth from the lowest in per cent of attendance of the 255 school districts in the state. This  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent of the children who are absent but who ought to be present to make our attendance even an average for the state, lose all school instruction while absent and when again present, retard the work of the rest. The effect of this poor attendance, even conservatively reckoned, must cause at least a 15 per cent decrease in the efficiency of the schools. This condition ought not continue. The parent who keeps a child unnecessarily from school not only robs his own child but hinders the work of the whole school. It is a crime committed against the community and is punishable in our courts.

HIGH SCHOOL REPORT

Pelham, N. H.

Feb. 5, 1923

Mr. Louis D. Record, Supt. of Schools,
Pelham School Committee,
Citizens of Pelham:

I herewith submit a report of activities and work accomplished in the Pelham High School from Sept. 11, 1922 to date.

On Sept. 11, 1922, the Pelham High School entered upon the second year of its existence with greater confidence than attended that event the previous year. On the opening day sixteen pupils were enrolled as opposed to eight in nineteen twenty-one. At the present time the membership has increased to seventeen, while at the same date last year it numbered only four. This year's increased enrollment is due to several causes.

The opening of a High School in Pelham was an experiment, attended with uncertainty of success. It was not an assured thing at the beginning of the year that the school would receive the approval of the State Department of Education. There seemed a slight doubt about pupils going on to the second year work in other institutions without examination. Those who knew these conditions and still sent their children to the Pelham High School showed the confidence they must have felt in the school committee, the superintendent and the teaching force. It is, indeed, gratifying that their trust was rewarded. For, after a personal inspection by Walter M. May, Deputy Commissioner of Education, the school was placed upon the approved list. At the close of the year five pupils were sent to do second year work in other institutions, without examination. One of these has done exceptionally fine work, having received an average above ninety in all subjects. The increase in enrollment this year cannot but be interpreted as an expression of approval by the citizens of Pelham of the work done in Pelham High School during 1921-22.

One change was made in the teaching force this year, Miss Theresa Shea of Nashua, N. H., succeeding Miss Abby Whitney. Miss Shea is a graduate of New Hampshire State College and well prepared to handle the subjects of which she is in charge.

The first activity undertaken by the Junior High and High School was a Clean-up Campaign. Probably comparatively few people realize the amount of work which must be done by the pupils in order to keep the building clean where there is no janitor. The school is organized into a Civic League and has its housekeeping department. But in order that too much work might not fall on any few, the campaign was started. The work was outlined and divided into some fifty different tasks, such as washing a window, throwing in wood, piling wood, sweeping the basements, cleaning the yard and many others. Volunteers were called for and at the end of the week practically everything was taken care of. Each piece of work was inspected by the head housekeeper and, if properly done, the doer received a badge as evidence. The campaign was a decided success but much of the work did not stay done and must be constantly repeated, if anything like sanitary conditions are to prevail. The periods of relaxation during the school day are short and the task is great so that, even though the spirit of the workers is good, we sometimes fall short of our ideals. A sink, improved toilets and a part-time janitor would make the sanitary conditions of Pelham High School more nearly what they should be and at the same time lighten the cares of both pupils and teachers. Janitor work is not usually a part of a high school teacher's program.

Soon after the close of our Clean-up Campaign, we were visited by Mr. William Morrison of the State Department of Education. He expressed his satisfaction with the work which had been done and again Pelham High School was placed upon the approved list.

The next activity of importance was the third annual bazaar. These bazaars bring a two-fold joy to the scholars—the joy of running a store and providing the things for us to buy. After all, the training received in school is only preparation for life. Where could these boys and girls better put into use the knowledge they have already gained than in managing and producing such a bazaar and entertainment? There is a chance to show mathematical and business ability, artistic tastes, good English, musical and dramatic ability and self-control. That such an affair is not distracting from the daily routine of study is proven by the fact that the average rank of the classes, for the marking period during which the bazaar was in preparation, was higher than for either of the other periods this year. On the other hand a bit of social life in connection with school work is an essential to interest. The public responded splendidly to our efforts and a good sum was realized. It was turned over to the school committee who augmented it sufficiently to purchase two one-pipe furnaces. They do fine work, are a great source of comfort and at the same time rid the classrooms of ugly looking stoves.

From the sale of candy enough was gained to purchase two wall clocks. These replaced one dilapidated alarm clock and are both useful and ornamental. There is now a balance on hand which will be used for further improvement at an early date.

The course of study remains the same as last year except for the addition of Latin as an optional study. There are four students taking the course which, considering the size of the class, is a normal percentage. The work consists mainly of grammar study with some drill in translation. Since most colleges require at least two years of Latin, the introduction of this subject to the curriculum offers to those who may wish to go to college the course which they most need.

The work in the other subjects has progressed well, having advanced, in some cases, farther than at this time last year.

There has been rumor of adding another year to the course, making this a two-year high school instead of a one-year. There is no question that such action would be a decided advantage to the present first year class and those to follow. For a large number of those who finish this year's work will probably go no farther. If there were another year here, most of them would undoubtedly take advantage of it.

I wish to extend the thanks of the teachers of the Pelham High School, to the superintendent, the school committee, parents and any citizens of Pelham who have contributed in any way to whatever degree of success may have been attained during the present year.

Respectfully,

BERTHA E. HOOKE,

Headmaster.
